The Henderson Sisters, Faye, Rosette and Sharon are life-long members of the Church of the Living God, headquartered in Indianapolis, IN. They have been saved since early childhood, and were raised by their parents to honor and serve the Lord in their living and giving. Their grandfather, the late Rev. Charles H. Williams, former pastor of the Friendly Baptist Church would often have them sing on gospel programs at his church when they were very young in age.

Their faithfulness and devotion to God, their Church and their families has caused them to be blessed and used by Him in the ministry as well as in demonstrating their musical gifts. Faye is an Elder & Evangelist, Rosette is Bishop and Pastor of her church, and Sharon is a minister and First Lady of her husband's church - all are still under the covering of the Church of the Living God.

They have been married to their husbands for 45 (Faye), 44 (Rosette), and 43 (Sharon) years - respectively, and have reared their children in the fear of God. God has spared them to be able to enjoy their grandchildren as well.

The Henderson Sisters represent stability and longevity, and have been singing traditional gospel songs in and around the city of Philadelphia for many years. As they sing, they also minister to the low in spirit and the brokenhearted. They have also traveled extensively throughout the country and Nassau, Bahamas spreading the gospel of Christ in music ministry.

The size of the crowd they minister to or the lack of finances makes no difference in how aggressively or earnestly they project the anointing that God has placed on them. They pride themselves in being able to say that they truly "live the lives they sing about in their songs."
